

The brief for the project was to creatively own a big or small issue. I decided to make an animation that shows how limited the contact online is due to the fact that people often choose to remain anonymous.

When an internet user follows an artist on Instagram, musician on TikTok or writer on WordPress, they often expect some sort of routine in their updates. When the routine is broken the follower has no way of knowing the reason why. The content creator might have simply taken a break without notice, but something might have also happened to them. If the content creator doesn't return the follower will never know what happened.

Process

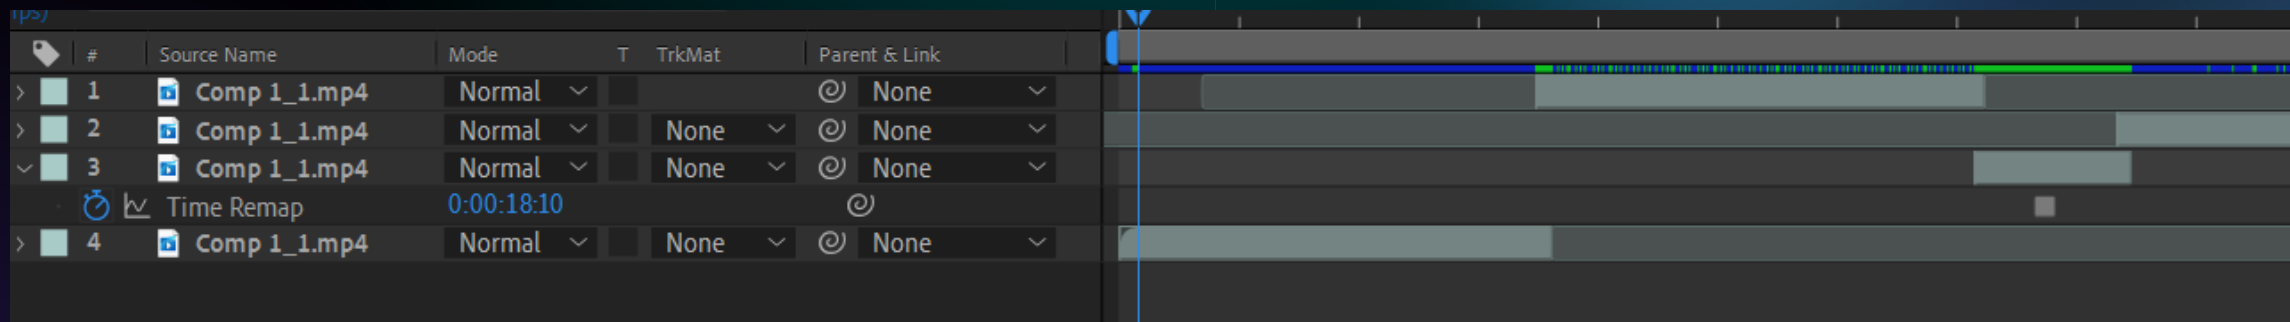

I made the animation by assembling pre made png images and short clips in After Effects.

The separate pieces were drawn in Procreate.

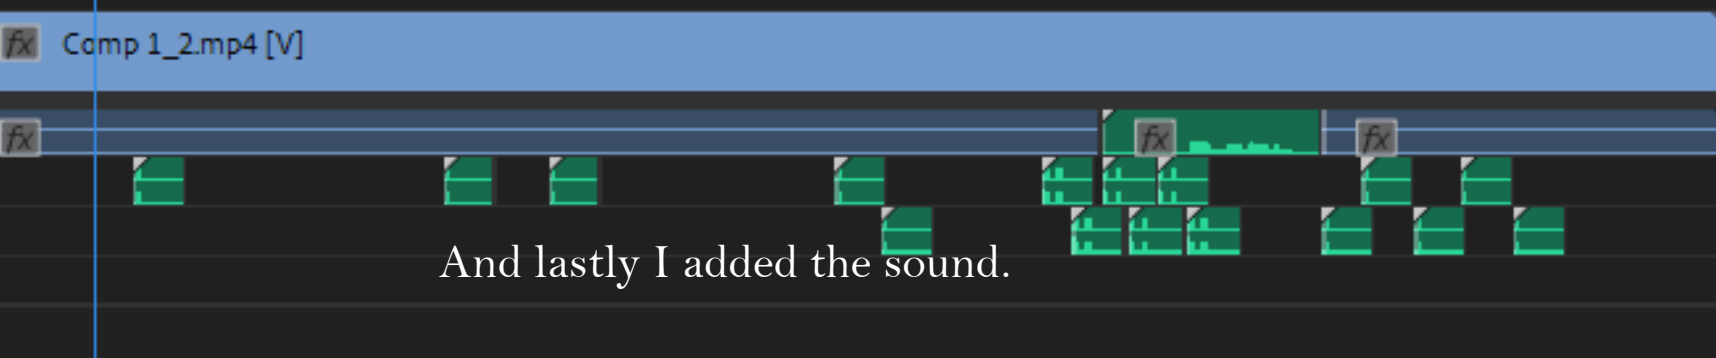

First I made the animation itself.

Then I adjusted its timing by editing it in a separate project.

And lastly I added the sound.

The video I displayed on during the feedback session was entirely deleted after I realized there are a lot of errors in it. I corrected the placing of anchors, change the screen ratio and forwent the use of Rotobrush (its horrible).
